

George Mason University is the largest public research university in Virginia, and it continues to grow. University officials wish to explore options for the future use of the adjacent “West Campus,” Mason’s Fairfax land west of Route 123.

We would like to hear your ideas for how this space should evolve in the short and long term. Please join fellow citizens and university, business, and government leaders May 22-24 for a strategic campus-planning workshop to share your vision for Mason’s West Campus.

This event is free and open to the public.
