

ARLINGTON CAMPUS VISION: LEADERSHIP

Join us for a conversation about George Mason University's role in developing the nation's future leaders and influencers.

George Mason University's Arlington Campus is one of its defining assets. On a Metro line and minutes from Washington, D.C., the campus is where Mason thought leaders educate tomorrow's attorneys, elected officials, diplomats, arts managers, and business executives.

The Arlington Campus will take on an even greater role in the future. We would like to hear your ideas on how to best utilize this strategically positioned Mason resource, including the currently vacant Original Building. Please join members of the university community and surrounding region March 8-9 for a planning workshop to share your vision for the Arlington Campus.

This event is free and open to the public.
